Sands Struck Him.

James Hedderman, a muscular longshoreman, lies at the point of death in the New York Hospital. House Surgeon Buel gave a certificate this morning stating that his patient could not live forty-eight hours.

Hedderman was struck in the head and his skull fractured during a row in "The Gap," a row of dirty frame bouses in the rear of 502 West Twenty-sixth street, late on Thanksgiving

His assailant was Charles Sands, and the weapon he used was a big piece of court-yard flagging, and with this he pounded Hedderman about the head and face until the latter fell unonscious in the yard.

Both parties live in "The Gap." Hedderman was carried to his apartments un

Both parties live in "The Gap."

Hedderman was carried to his apartments unconscious, and at noon yesterday his friends became alarmed and summoned a physician.

Upon seeing the man the doctor at once decided that he was in a dangerous condition, and had him removed to the New York Hospital, and then notified the police.

Capt. Grant and Detectives Chrey and Logan, of the West Twentieth street station, immediately instituted an investigation.

The tenants in "The Gap" do not love the police, and they professed entire ignorance of the assault.

After diligent inquiry, however, Capt. Grant learned that a woman. Ella Devlin, was implicated in the tragedy.

She is a young and rather pretty, but somewhat ignorant, girl, who is sometimes called "The Belle of" the Gap."

Detectives Carey and Logan hunted for the girl all day yesterday, but she was concealed and they did not find her until late last night.

Then they saw her glidding through the dark alley leading from "the Gap" to the street, and arrested her. At the station-house Capt. Grant questioned her closely and finally got the story out of her.

Her sister is married to John Sands, also of "the Gap." John is a terror on account of his great size and strength, and has been frequently in the hands of the bolice.

Thankskiving night there was a jollification in Charley Sands's apartment, at which were present John and his wife, Nellie Devlin, James Hedderman, and several others.

Beer and whiskey were the only refreshments, and about middinght, Nellie went out of the room and, unperceived, Hedderman followed her.

A few minutes later the roysterers upstairs was startled by screams.

and found Nellie and Hedderman struggling in the hallway.

The girl, between her sobs, declared that Hedderman had tried to kass her and nearly tore her clothes off.

Hedderman tried to run then, but the Sands were too quick for him.

Charlie picked up the piece of flagstone, and, as stated, banged him with it on the head until he dropped. Then the party went back and finished their night's fun. After gleaning these facts from the girl Carey and Logan went to "The Gap" and arrested the Sands brothers. the Sands brothers.

Charlie was arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court to-day, and remanded to await the result of Hedderman's injuries, which result will probably make him out a murderer.

John Sands and Nellie Devlin were sent to the House of Detention as witnesses.

Why Capt. Bailey and Mate Nicholson Killed the Chinese Ship's Cook.

Captain Justus A. Bailey, Mate Donald A. icholson and the crew of the American ship iouthern Cross were in Commissioner Shield's office this morning to tell how Ah Low, the Chinese cook of that vessel, came to his death June 27 last, while the ship was at sea.

Ah Low shipped on the Southern Cross when she left this port in October, 1887. He was a meek, mild little fellow, who constantly smoked

His opium debauches became so frequent and extended that the captain finally punished him. Ah Low, the meek and lowly, took his punishent much to heart and retired to his galley. He never came out alive. The crew did not get any breakfast on the morning of Jan. 27, and on investigation found that the cook had barricaded the galley. The mate ordered the Chinaman to come out. The cook answered with a bultet, and Mate Nicholson suddenly found that he had other and more important business in another part of the ship.

As the day were on the cook amused himself by popping buliets at first one and then another of the crew, alternating his fun by chopping a big hole in the deck, inside the galley.

Capt. Balley knew that powder and shot were stored away directly underneath the galley. So did the cook.

stored away directly underneath the gailey. So did the cook.

The captain knew that if the cook reached the explosives it was good-by all around.

He armed the crew, and they opened fire on the gailey. The chopping ceased, and when the gailey door was burst open Ah Low was found dead, with a bullet in his heart.

The American Consul at Sydney, N. S. W., notified the Attorney-General, who instructed the United States District-Attorneyshere to prosecute the men on their arrival. The captain and mate were arrested yesterday by United States marshals and held in $2,500 bail by Commissioner Shields.

marshals and held in $2,500 ball by Commissioner Shields.

Carl Larsen, a Swedish sailor, was the first witness called. He shipped from this city Oct. 7, 1887, with other seamen named Thomas Holmes, J. Asbery, Tom Peterson, Wm. Reeder, — varburg and Carl Stalis.

He told the story of the shooting substantially as above. He did not know who fired the first shot. The captain and mate, he said, walked around the galley, firing into it from all sides and through the latch and on top of the galley. The cook returned the fire, shooting about tentimes.

The cook returned the fire, showing out of the times.

Lisrsen said he didn't see anything out of the way with the cook. Lawyer Sturges, for Capt. Balley, cross-examined the sailor, but could not learn anything further.

The frict-Attorney Rose asked the witness whether he was paid off yet.

"No, sir."

"Well, will you stay on the ship until Thursday? We want you as a witness."

"No, sir." said Larren, promptly.

"You won't? I'll lock you up, then," said the Commissioner.

The captain finally said he would keep back the man's pay and thus keep the man.

The examination was then adjourned until 2 o'clock Tue-day afternoon.

Hanna Southworth's Life or Death Fight with Justice Will Then Begin.

As a result of the conferences between Lawyer Howe and Col. Fellows, it was this morning agreed to set down the trial of Mrs. Hanna B. Southworth, the murderess of Major Stephen L. Pettus, for Monday, Dec. 16.

This will not give any more time than is abso lutely necessary for both sides to prepare for the trial, which promises to be one of the most sensational ever known in the annals of the criminal courts of this city. The defense are scouring both New York and Brooklyn to obtain witnesses who will substantiate Mrs. Southworth's statements and reveal the true character of her alleged betrayer, and large number of witnesses will be brought from distant cities for the same purpose. Those who are looking after the interests of the murdered man's family are also preparing to meet this testimony, and will co-operate with the District-Attorney in conducting a vigorous prosecution. It is not certain yet whether the trial will take place in General Bessions or before the Court of Over and Terminer, which will be in session at the time fixed. In the former case Recorder Smyth would probably preside. The matter depends entirely upon the state of the calendars in the two courts at the time. Mrs. Southworth's counsel says that she is very much depressed in spirits again and fears that the two weeks' close confinement at the Tombs prison which is now before her will be a poor preparation for the strain of the trial. She is restless and nervous and sleeps very little. Her mother visits her every day, and sometimes the brother accompanies her. They bring the prisoner many little delicacies, but she seems to care very little for them. All her meals are now served by a cateror, as she will not touch the prison fare.

It is stated that several new victims of the allurements of Pettus have been discovered, and that they will be produced as witnesses for the defance at the trial.

One of these, a beautiful Brooklyn girl, May Thompson by name, is said to have met Pettus about three years ago, while she was working in a Myrtle avenue store. He accosted her in the street one evening and made her acquaintance in that way. very much depressed in spirits again and fears

MILLIONS FOR MISS HOYT.

She Wins a Lawsuit Involving Lands Worth Over $2,000,000

Miss Mary Irene Hoyt, the eccentric daughter of the late millionaire, Jesse Hoyt, whose contest of her father's will has become a course celebre, has won a legal victory in the West Virginia United States Court by which her right to property valued at $2 000,000 has been placed beyond question.

Miss Hoyts suit involved 480,000 acres of land in Wyoming. McDowell and Logan Counties, W. Va., which had been sold by the State to Jesse R. Irwin, from whom Miss Hoyt purchased the property. The land is now worth an average of 85 per acre.

The Court granted an injunction against the Commissioners of School Laws, forbidding any proceedings against these lands in the interest of the State School Fund.

O'BYRNE LOCATED.

The Contumacious Dock Witness at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City.

Col. John O'Byrne, the crator of the County Democracy, has transferred his abode to Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, temporarily. Why he has done this is explained by the remark of his counsel, Mr. Abraham Gruber:

'It's much more pleasant living in Jersey than living in jail, " The gallant Colonel refused to be interviewed

The gallant Colonel refused to be interviewed by an Evenino World reporter, who called at his hotel this morning. It was clear, however, that he won't come back just yet, in spite of warrants and threats.

In this connection it might be remarked that it is very strange that Col. O'Byrne's sons are not informed of his whereabouts.

They were laboring under the hallncination this morning that he had just steeped out of his office in the Stewart Building to lunch. At least that is the information fired at the reporter, who called at the office.

Col. O'Byrne's enforced absence on foreign soil will be continued for an indefinite perioduntil he can get redress for his fanciel wrongs at the Par of the Court of Appeals, and in these days of legal circumflocution and delay no one will pretend to say when this will occur.

It is expected to be a long time, however, and will perhaps make a big hole in that $13,000 "counsel fee" received from the Cystermen's Association for the Colonel's work in their behalf in securing them dock privileges.

This fee it was that made an exile of Mr. O'Byrne.

He refused to tell the Commissioners of Accounts what he did with it and declined to testify regarding many other matters he was asked concerning, when a witness at the Dock Department investigation.

The doughty Colonel insisted that it was not in the province of the Commissioners of Accounts to make such inquiries.
